OLLIE M. JAMES OPENS CAMPAIGN

At Owingsville Monday, Sept. 11,
And Spoke to a Large And Enthusiastic Crowd.

Hon. Ollie M. James opened his campaign as the Democratic nominee for United States Senator at Owingsville on Monday. Three thousand people heard him. It was a great gathering of loyal Democrats who attested by their presence their interest in this campaign. It was not only a personal compliment to Mr. James, but it embodied a tribute to the personnel of the State Ticket as well.

Mr. James has not made a better speech during his long career as a popular orator. He spoke with an earnestness and eloquence that moved his hearers to repeated applause. He ridiculed Judge O'Rear's contention that this was a campaign to be fought out on State issues alone, and he showed that the platform upon which Judge O'Rear stands and which was practically written by him, gives an unqualified endorsement to President Taft, and all of the acts of his administration, besides endorsing him for re-election for the Presidency. His arraignment of the national administration for its betrayal of the people, and for its failure to carry out its platform pledges was as fine a piece of invective as has been heard upon the stump in Kentucky for many years.

He proved that Taft's vetoes of the bills reducing the tariff on wool, cotton and farming implements was a surrender to the trusts which have so long enriched themselves at the expense of those who toil. He refused to permit Judge O'Rear to escape responsibility for the acts of his party in the nation on the flimsy plea that he had not heard of the bills reducing the tariff, or President Taft's vetoes of those bills.

Mr. James paid a deserved tribute to Governor McCreary, and to his associates on the State Ticket, and placed emphasis upon the fact that the voters of the nation were looking to Kentucky this fall to sound the note of victory that would be followed next year by the triumphant march of Democracy on to Washington.

Chas. Moore arrived Wednesday and Mrs. Moore and Hunter will arrive Saturday to be guests of Judge and Mrs. James Moore and to attend their golden wedding anniversary which will be celebrated Monday night.

Mrs. Fannie Walker who spent the summer with her mother at Rockford, Ill., has returned to resume her work in the Graded School leaving her mother quite feeble.

Miss Francis Blue who has been in Evansville consulting a specialist as to her eyes, has returned.

Mr. Morris Orme of New Albany Ind. is the guest of his nephew, J. H. Orme on Depot St.

GLORIOUS! GRAND!!

Livingstone County Comes to The Forefront.

News has been received here as predicted freely by those familiar with the matter that Livingston to fiscal court appropriated $16,000.00 yesterday to build turnpikes and to assist in extending the Jefferson Davis Highway through that county.

This is the greatest move to ward real advancement and progress ever made in the good Co. of Livingston and its now up to Crittenden to do her part, and meet the procession and then keep up with it. Are we equal to the emergency? Who says Crittenden will fail? Perish the thought.

Marion Party at Smithland.

The following gentlemen; W. B. Yandell, Dr. Arthur Mather, T. H. Cochran, Jno. A. Moore, J. A. Moore, C. W. Haynes, R. F. Haynes, G. H. Foster, J. L. Travis, Rev. M. E. Miller, Douglas Clement, L. E. Guess, J. G. Rochester, Jesse Olive and C. A. Taylor, from Marion came over last Wednesday and addressed a crowded house at the court house in the interest of the Jeff Davis Highway from Franklin via Hopkinsville to Paducah.

Many good speeches were made and several people promised to go to Paducah on the 22nd to the convention and Judge Clarke has called the Fiscal Court to meet next Tuesday to take steps regarding it.

Let everyman in the County come and give the court his sentiments. Our Fiscal Court is a good one and wants to do right but people must let them know what they want. So be on hand.

THE BABY SHOW

The Baby Show opens Thursday night at Opera House. The man with the camera has been busy and is getting the Marion children pictured in almost every attitude imaginable.

Besides the regular pictures the kodak man is snapping the pictures of many of the citizens when they least expect it and the company will give a present to the persons whose pictures are caught this way if they are in the audience when their pictures are shown.

Many other special attractions will be added every night and the managers promise the best show ever given here for the money.

J. W. Givens will give away a fine ham and Mrs. Lottie Terry a beautiful new fall hat on one night next week. Every body who visits the baby show will receive a coupon on these useful prizes.

Toronto will appear on the stage at 8:30 on Monday night. The person guessing who it is will receive a present.

New Depot For Mayfield Should Be Marion.

Mayfield, Ky., Sept. 15.—Mayfield is to have a new passenger depot at the site where the old one stands, and the estimated cost is about $10,000. News was conveyed to a committee from the Commercial club through A. E. Clift, representative of the Illinois Central railroad company. Money For Turnpikes.

Additional $1,000 Donated to Lincoln Way by Allen County.

Scottsville, Ky., Sept. 20.—The Allen county Fiscal Court yesterday contracted with the Champion Bridge company, of Wilmington, O., for two steel bridges to be erected on the central Lincoln road. One over Bays Fork creek, one mile north of Scottsville, and one over Little Trammell creek, six miles south of Scottsville. The court also made an additional appropriation of $1,000 to the Lincoln road.

LaRue Accepts Bridge

Hodgenville, Ky., Sept. 20.—The new steel bridge over the South Fork, between Buffalo and Magnolia on the Lincoln Way, has been completed and received by the county officials who pronounce it one of the best ever built in the county. The bridge is a part of the Central Lincoln Way. The work on that road will be completed its length in in Larue county. The metal will then be spread the distance from Buffalo to Hart county. There is now sufficient and labor assured to complete it. The residents of Larue county on the route will contribute, without charge, three weeks of work on the road, but the date has not yet been set.

Road Overseers Take Notice.

The law requires each overseer to make a sworn report each year from the 15th to 30th of Sept., for use of Fiscal court and this report should be made to county clerk. No allowance will be made for plows and teams used by overseers who fail to make report as required by law.

Closes Meeting.

Rev. James F. Price closed a fine meeting at Caney Fork in Butler Co., last Sunday night. This is a Presbyterian church more than 100 years old. The chartered members of this church came from Virginia in 1799 and settled in a beautiful limestone Valley. They were of the F. F. V. (First families of Va.) They were of the original Presbyterian church that organized. Notwithstanding the farmers were very busy cutting their tobacco the attendance was excellent. The church house was neatly kept and beautifully decorated. The music was hard to excel.

Fourteen made professions of faith and quite a number will be added to the church. At the close of the meeting all denominations besieged Mr. Price, begging him to come back and hold a meeting next year. Mr. Price begins a meeting at Pleasant Hill church, near Rockfield, Ky., tonight.

A BIG DAY AT FREDONIA

Great Crowd Attracted by Colt Show And Grand Barbecue.

Since the writer has had the pleasure of living in the thriving little city of Fredonia, Ky., never has he seen the town so alive with the interest that was taken in the colt show that was given by the owners of some of the best horses and jacks in this country anywhere; Thos. Y. Ordway, owner of "Denmark," "King-Eclipse," "George," all fine horses, and "Bob" and "Gray-Eagle" two fine jacks; and Wm. D. Wyatt, owner of "Joe Glover," "Billiken" and "Message," all fine, well bred horses.

Mr. Ordway and Mr. Wyatt decided some months ago that they would give a big barbecue dinner for all the people, that had patronized their horses and had colts to show this season, and sent out invitations to all of their patrons to meet them here on the second day of September and bring their colts and to the ones having the colts, as per the judges, Messrs. C. T. Martin, Princeton; Jas. Baker, View, Ky.; and George Foster, Marion, Ky.; were awarded the prizes as follows: Wm. Wyatt giving as first prize, from any of his horses getting the best colt, $12.50, this prize went to Dixie Satterfield, of Princeton, Ky. The second prize, offered by Mr. Wyatt, was for the second best colt, $10.00, this prize went to W. E. Asbridge, of the Frances neighborhood. The third prize of Mr. Wyatt's $5.00, went to Dixie Moore, of this place. All of the contestants had good colts, and it was doubtful as to who would get the first money. But all were pleased with the decisions of the judges.

Mr. Ordway gave $7.00 premium for best colt from Denmark which was awarded to Mr. McGregory, of Dycusburg, Ky. Mr. Ordway also gave a premium of $7.00 for best colt from King Eclipse. This prize went to A. D. Belt, and Mr. Belt refused $90.00 cash for the colt. This speaks well for King Eclipse. Mr. Ordway's next prize was $7.00 for the best colt of George, his big coach horse. This prize went to Jimmie Loyd, and Mr. Loyd refused $100.00 cash on the grounds, beating Eclipse ten points on cash sales. Mr. Ordway offered as next prize $7.00 for the best mule colt from his jack, "Bob." This prize went to J. M. Patterson. His next prize of $7.00, for the best mule colt from "Gray Eagle," was awarded T. A. Bogg.

This closed the awarding of the prizes, and everybody on the grounds, which was located in the beautiful grove of Henry C. Rice's, was invited to pass into the tables that were filled with the best of barbecued meats and everything to complete the making up of a good meal, and to eat to their own satisfaction. Every one seemed to enjoy themselves, and all said that this was the most successful barbecues that they had ever attended in this place. The meat was simply fine, well cooked, as I know, for I ate a good size piece myself, and I pronounce it fine. Thanks to Messrs. Wyatt and Ordway for their thoughtfulness in getting a thing of this nature started, for it not only gets the people together at these times, but it makes every owner and breeder take more interest in their colts, and consequently develops them into better horses. These gentlemen that have started this colt show, should have the support of every citizen and business man in this town, each business man offering some prize in some certain class. It brings people to town, and they trade while they are here. Offer some encouragement to the enterprise and let's all get better acquainted.

The toast master and general all around man of the day, and will add, one of the most popular gentlemen that we have in our town—The Hon. Henry C. Rice, was full of business all the day, as the most of the entertaining and looking after things in general was as usual thrown upon him. But Mr. Rice's experience in this line enabled him to handle the matter both with credit to himself and to the perfect satisfaction of Messrs. Wyatt and Ordway. Everything went off as smooth as it could, considering the big crowd of 500 people in town, having with them in all 156 colts. There were 2,400 pounds of meat cooked to feed the crowd, which was sufficient to feed all and then some.

Gentlemen, in conclusion let's come together and help the promoters of this new colt show, and next season let's not only have a colt show, but the best one and two year olds from our horses, and get the farmers interested in raising better stock. We could also have other things added to this, as good drivers and saddlers and make it the best in the county. Knowing that every one feels indebted to Mr. Wyatt and Mr. Ordway for the treatment that they received and hoping that we will have the pleasure of seeing them here again next year, with better colts, well close by saying that we are a well wisher of the cause and wish its promotion at all times.

Respectfully,
THE DRUGGIST.

Making Men Good by Law.

That you cannot by law make an individual a good man, in one sense of the word, is true; but that you can by law remove such evil agencies as barrooms, and thereby minimize the temptations that beset young men, is absolutely true. Experience teaches us that, were it not for the law it would be impossible to maintain our government and to protect the lives and property of our people. This has been so in all ages and with all nations, and the time will never come when any government can exist without the enactment of suitable laws for the enforcement of its decrees and the maintenance of law and order.—By United States Judge Pritchard of North Carolina.

J. O. Tabor, Marion, Ky., says:—"I was afflicted with kidney trouble for about six years. The pains in my back were severe at times and when I was stooping or lifting, sharp twinges passed through my loins. My back always ached more intensely at night and in the morning I felt very lame. I tired easily, was languid and nervous and had headaches. The kidney secretions also passed too frequently and caused me annoyance. I took the contents of one and a half boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Haynes & Taylor's Drug Store and they rid me of every symptom of my trouble. I am now in good health.

Woman's Danger Periods Made Safe

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Here is proof:

Natick, Mass.—"I cannot express what I went through during the Change of Life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold. I had creepy sensations and could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I had a tumor. "I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it has worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Nathan B. Groaton, 51 No. Main St., Natick, Mass.

ANOTHER SIMILAR CASE

Cornwallville, N. Y.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time for Change of Life, nervousness, and a fibroid growth.

"Two doctors advised me to go to the hospital, but one day while I was away visiting, I met a woman who told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and I know it helped me wonderfully. I am very thankful that I was told to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. Boughton, Cornwallville, N. Y., Greene Co.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as those above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Keep a Box of MI-O-NA in Your House and You'll Always have one.

Some people eat too much, some drink too much, and hundreds of thousands of men smoke too much—especially in the evening.

Use discretion if you can, but if you can't, use wisdom. Take two MI-O-NA stomach tablets before you go to bed and you'll awake minus a headache in the morning.

MI-O-NA stomach tablets are guaranteed to end indigestion acute or chronic; to promptly banish gas, heartburn, sour risings, etc. They are the best remedy for dizziness, biliousness, nervousness, headache, constipation, vomiting of pregnancy, car or sea sickness, foul breath, night sweats, bad dreams, coated tongue, languid feeling. And a box only costs 50 cents at Haynes & Taylor's and druggists everywhere. S 7-2

W. J. Stone for Congress.

Hon. W. J. Stone, of Lyon County, will very probably be a candidate for congress from the First District to succeed Hon. Ollie James, who will undoubtedly be elected as United States Senator to succeed Senator T. H. Paynter.

There will no doubt be a number of other candidates who hope to step into the shoes that will be laid aside by the soon-to-be Senator. Without disparagement to any other aspirant in the First district, we do say that that part of the State has not a man who is better qualified to represent the people in congress than Will Stone.

We have known Capt. Stone for more than a half century. We were born and reared within a few miles of each other. We went to the same school, drank water from the same gourd, played marbled and bull-pen on the same ground and as boys loved the same little school girl.

Captain Stone is one of nature's noblemen. His whole life has been a clean one. While in congress for several terms, he made the district one of the best representatives it ever had at Washington. Having been born and reared in the First district, we of course feel an interest in things political and otherwise in that section of the State. If it were left to us, we would send Will Stone to congress the remainder of his life.—Madisonville Hustler.

Capt. W. J. Stone has just returned from a trip through most of the counties of the purchase, and in every town he was greeted by crowds of from one to four thousand voters, all ready and anxious to have him their standard bearer for Congress to succeed Ollie James. However Capt. Stone did not make the trip in his own interest, but ostensibly in the interest of the farmers, whose friend he has been since he shouldered his musket and marched to the front in 1861. He is a grand, noble, honorable gentleman and Statesman, having served us with such distinction in Congress for ten years, we could not possibly do better than return him.—Lyon County Herald.

Though we are not a voter in the First Congressional District, we would enjoy being one long enough to vote for this grand old man, Capt. Stone. He is a man of many virtues' one who is loved by all, one whom the tobacco growers are looking to for assistance, and the best of all, a Confederate soldier, one who fought and bled, and we firmly believe that if Capt. Stone makes the race for the nomination to succeed Hon. Ollie James that he will win hands down. So here's to you Captain, hoping that you will be the man to fill the seat in Congress that is being vacated by your now good Congressman, Ollie James.—Clay Times.

Eddyville Herald: We are glad to see the papers over this Congressional district and many of the leading dailies of the State, mentioning in favorable terms the name of Capt. W. J. Stone for Congress. This is as it should be, and the man that gets one more vote than this noble statesman and veteran of the Civil war will be our next Congressman. Capt. Stone will carry his own county without the loss of a single vote, and home is the place to test a man's worth. He has stood by his people to the last ditch in whatever he undertook for them, and they love him. Besides having served with distinction in the great war between the North and South, he has served us faithfully in the Legislature, securing for us the penitentiary here, and for ten years he served the proud Gibraltar district in Congress, coming home with perhaps more nice things said of him and more praise for his honest effort to faithfully serve his constituency than any man in Congress.

In a talk with Manager Elliott yesterday, Tuesday, he said:

"Let me again urge upon the prime importance of the firing of this crop. I know better than the growers the needs of manufacturers. They are short on fired tobacco. They are well supplied with stocks of unfired tobacco. In consequence every member of this association will profit materially this year by firing his crop. And every member will stand in his own light who simply hangs his tobacco in the barn and lets it air-cure."

It is a great boon, as I have heretofore recorded in this column, to be advised by a man who knows. Manager Elliott is a specialist, he is paid to look after the interests of the members of this association. He is therefore in the line of his employment, ever alert as a student of market conditions. He, if anybody does, knows the kind of tobacco that manufacturers will pay the biggest price for.

And Manager Elliott is emphatic in his advice to members to fire this crop.

And I will send the foregoing to every editor in the district and they will republish. For they are the best friends the farmers have.

Read and Ponder.

The Western Tobacco Journal is very emphatic in its advice against cutting tobacco while in a green state. "Frosted tobacco is hardly more worthless than tobacco cut green," says the Journal. And the local buyers with whom I have talked, and Manager Elliott also, are just as positive that the tobacco should not be cut green. There is practically no market for it:

DON'T CUT TOBACCO GREEN.

Tobacco growers make a serious mistake when they harvest their tobacco green. When it is cut green it is virtually never fit for any purpose, as it becomes light and chaffy and there is practically no market for it. Even when frost threatens, the best thing to do is to take the risk. Frosted tobacco is hardly more worthless than tobacco cut green. So let the planter keep this caution always in view and never make the mistake of cutting his tobacco green. — Western Tobacco Journal. Banks in Henderson Gleaner.

There are lots of folks who like to dance if some one can be found to pay the fiddler and other bills.

There is some talk of establishing another newspaper in Marion, provided the promoters can find some one to back it financially and pay the bills. From 8 years experience we can assure them that they will certainly need some body to pay the bills each month, and the hanks, too, each week. The old saying "it takes money to make the mare go" certainly applies to running a newspaper, the editor being the one to get nothing.

Democrats must realize that a vote under the rooster this year means a vote for Legislation who will name the next United States Senator. If the democrats win, Ollie James will represent Kentucky at Washington, when the great battle for a reduction of the tariff is to be fought. If the Republicans carry Legislature, Congressman Langley, or Congressman Powers, will be chosen Senator. Is it any wonder that Judge O'Rear does not want to discuss national issues?

The stoutest timber stands on Norwegian rocks, where tempests rage, and long, hard winters reign. The muscles are seen most fully developed in the brawny arm that plies the hammer. Even so, the most vigorous and healthy piety is that which is ever active in a busy world, which has difficulties to battle with, which has its hands full of good works, which has neither time nor room for evil, but aiming at great things for God and man, promptly dismisses temptation with Nehemiah's answer: "I have a great work to do, therefore, I cannot come down." — Bishop McIlvain.

The Great Conservation Novel

WETHERFORD PASSES ON.

SOON after the reporter left Cavanagh, the old man called to Swenson: "The old man can't last through another such night as last night was, and I wish you would persuade Mrs. Wetherford and her daughter to return to the valley. They can do nothing here—absolutely nothing. Please say that."

Swenson repeated his commands with all the emphasis he could give them, but neither Lize nor Lee would consent to go. "It would be heathenish to leave him alone in this lonesome hole," protested Lize.

"I shall stay till he is free," added Lee. And with uneasy heart she crossed the bridge and walked on and on toward the cabin till she was close enough to detect the lines of care on her lover's haggard face.

"Stop!" he called sharply. "Keep away! Why don't you obey me? Why don't you go back to the valley?"

"Because I will not leave you alone—I can't! Please let me stay!"

"I beg of you go back."

The roar of the stream made it necessary to speak loudly, and he could not put into his voice the tenderness he felt at the moment, but his face was knotted with pain as he asked, "Don't you see you add to my uneasiness—my pain?"

"We're so anxious about you," she answered. "It seems as though we should be doing something to help you."

He understood and was grateful for the tenderness which brought her so near to him, but he was forced to be stern.

"There is nothing you can do—nothing more than you are doing. It helps me to know that you are here, but you must not cross the bridge. Please go back." There was pleading as well as command in his voice, and with a realization of the passion his voice conveyed she retraced her steps, her heart beating quickly with the joy which his words conveyed.

At sunset Redfield returned, bringing with him medicine, but no nurse. "Nobody will come up here," he said. "I reckon Ross is doomed to fight it out alone. The solitude, the long trail, scares the bravest of them away. I tried and tried—no use. Eleanor would have come, of course—demanded to come—but I would not permit that. She commissioned me to bring you both down to the ranch."

Lee Virginia thanked him, but reiterated her wish to stay until all possible danger to Cavanagh was over.

Redfield crossed the bridge and laid the medicines down outside the door. "The nurse from Sulphur refused to come when she found that her patient was in a mountain cabin. I'm sorry, old man. I did the best I could."

"Never mind," replied Cavanagh. "I'm still free from any touch of fever. I'm tired, of course, but good for another night of it. My main anxiety concerns Lee. Get her to go home with you if you can."

"I'll do the best I can," responded Redfield, "but meanwhile you must not think of getting out of the forest service. I have some cheering news for you. The president has put a good man into the chief's place."

Cavanagh's face lighted up. "That'll help some," he exclaimed. "But who's the man?"

Redfield named him. "He was a student under the chief, and the chief says he's all right, which satisfies me. Furthermore, he's a real forester and not a political jobber or a corporation attorney."

"That's good," repeated Cavanagh, "and yet," he said sadly, "it leaves the chief out just the same."

"No; the chief is not out. He's where he can fight for the idea to better advantage than when he was a subordinate under another man. Anyhow, he asks us all to line up for the work and not to mind him. The work, he says, is bigger than any man. Here's that resignation of yours," he said, taking Cavanagh's letter from his pocket. "I didn't put it on file. What shall I do with it?"

"Throw it to me," said Cavanagh curtly.

Redfield tossed it over the hitching pole, and Ross took it up, looked at it for a moment in silence, then tore it into bits and threw it on the ground.

"What are your orders, Mr. Supervisor?" he asked, with a faint, quizzical smile around his eyes.

"There's nothing you can do but take care of this man. But as soon as you are able to ride again I've got some special work for you. I want you to join with young Bingham, the ranger on Rock creek, and line up the Triangle cattle. Murphy is reported to have thrown on the forest nearly a thousand head more than his permit calls for. I want you to see about that. Then complete your maps so that I can turn them in on the 1st of November, and about the middle of December you are to take charge of this forest in my stead. Eleanor has decided to take the children abroad for a couple of years, and as I am to be over there part of the time I don't feel justified in holding down the supervisor's position. I shall resign in your favor. Wait now!" he called warningly. "The district forester and I framed all this up as we rode down the hill yesterday, and it goes. Oh, yes, there's one thing more. Old man Dunn—"

"I know."

"How did you learn it?"

"A reporter came boiling over the ridge about noon today wanting me to give him the names which Dunn had given me. I was strongly tempted to do as he asked me to—you know these newspaper men are sometimes the best kind of detectives for running down criminals—but on second thought I concluded to wait. I had discussed the matter with you. I haven't much faith in the county authorities."

"Ordinarily I would have my doubts myself," replied Redfield, "but the whole country is roused, and we're going to round up these men this time sure. The best men and the big papers all over the west are demanding an exercise of the law, and the reward we have offered"—He paused suddenly. "By the way, that reward will come to you if you can bring about the arrest of the criminals."

"The reward should go to Dunn's family," replied the ranger soberly. "Poor chap, he's sacrificed himself for the good of the state."

"That's true. His family is left in bad shape."

Cavanagh broke off the conversation suddenly. "I must go back to"—He had almost said "back to Wetherford. My patient needs me," he exclaimed. "How does he seem?"

"He's surely dying. In my judgment he can't last the night, but so long as he's conscious it's up to me to be on the spot."

Redfield walked slowly back across the river, thinking on the patient courage of the ranger.

"It isn't the obvious kind of thing, but it's courage all the same," he said to himself.

Meanwhile Lize and Virginia, left alone beside the fire, had drawn closer together.

The girl's face, so sweet and so pensive, wrought strongly upon the older woman's sympathy. Something of her own girlhood came back to her. Being freed from the town and all its associations, she became more considerate, more thoughtful. She wished to speak, and yet she found it very hard to begin. At last she said, with a touch of mockery in her tone, "You like Ross Cavanagh almost as well as I do myself, don't you?"

The girl flushed a little, but her eyes remained steady. "I would not be here if I did not," she replied.

"Neither would I. Well, now, I have got something to tell you—something I ought to have told you long ago, something that Ross ought to know. I intended to tell you that first day you came back, but I couldn't somehow get to it, and I kept putting it off till—well, then I got fond of you, and every day made it harder." Here she made her supreme effort. "Child, I'm an old bluff. I'm not your mother at all."

Lee stared at her in amazement. "What do you mean?" she asked.

"I mean your real mother died when you was a tiny little babe. You see, I was your father's second wife—in fact, you weren't a year old when we married. Ed made me promise never to let you know. We were to bring turned quickly, crying out: "Don't come too close and don't be frightened. I set the place on fire myself. The poor old herder died last night and is decently buried in the earth, and now we are burning the cabin and every thread it contains to prevent the spread of the plague. Hugh and Swenson have divided their garments with me, and this blanket which I wear is my only coat. All that I have is in that cabin now going up in smoke—my guns, pictures, everything."

but Reddy. I told him the day we started up here."

The girl's mind ran swiftly over the past as she listened. The truth of the revelation reached her instantly, explaining a hundred strange things which had puzzled her all her life. The absence of deep affection between herself and Lize was explained. Their difference in habit, temperament, thought—all became plain. "But my mother," she said at last—"who was my mother?"

"I never saw her. You see, Ed came into the country, bringing you, a little, motherless babe. He always said your mother was a fine woman, but I never so much as saw a picture of her. She was an educated woman, he said—a southern woman—and her name was Virginia, but that's about all I can tell you of her. Now I am going to let Ross know all of this as soon as I can. It will make a whole lot of difference in what he thinks of you."

She uttered all this much as a man would have done, with steady voice and with bright eyes, but Lee Virginia could feel beneath her harsh inflections the deep emotion which vibrated there, and her heart went out toward the lonely woman in a new rush of tenderness. Now that she was released from the necessity of excusing her mother's faults—faults she could now ignore—now that she could look upon her as a loyal friend, she was moved to pity and to love, and, rising, she went to her and put her arms about her neck and said: "This won't make any difference. I am going to stay with you and help you just the same."

The tears came to the old woman's eyes, and her voice broke as she replied. "I knew you would say that, Lee Virginia, but all the same I don't intend to have you do any such thing. You've got to cut loose from me altogether, because some fine chap is going to come along one of these days, and he won't want me even as a step-mother-in-law. No; I have decided that you and me had better live apart. I'll—"

"I am a slave to be up in summer, where I can visit you now and again, but I guess I am elected to stay right here in the Fork. They don't like me, and I don't like them, but I have kind of got used to their ways of looking at me sideways. They don't matter as much as it would up there in the city."

Lee turned back wistfully toward the story of her mother. "Where did my mother meet my father? Do you know that?"

"No, I don't. It was a runaway match, Ed said. I never did know who her folks were, only I know they thought she was marrying the wrong man."

The girl sighed as her mind took in the significance of her mother's coming to this wild country, leaving all that she knew and loved behind. "Poor little mother! It must have been very hard for her."

"I am afraid she did have a hard time, for Ed admitted to me that he hadn't so much as a saddle when he landed in the state. He hadn't much when I met him first, but everybody liked him. He was one of the handsomest men that ever jumped a saddle. But he was close mouthed. You never could get anything out of him that he didn't want to tell, and I was never able to discover what he had been doing in the southern part of the state."

As she pondered on her changed relationship to Lize, Lee's heart lightened. It would make a difference to Ross. It would make a difference to the Redfields. Traitorous as it seemed, it was a great relief, a joy, to know that her own mother—her real mother—had been "nice." She must have been nice or Lize would not have said so, she reasoned, recalling that her stepmother had admitted her feeling of jealousy.

At last Lize rose. "Well, now, dearie, I reckon we had better turn in. It is getting chilly and late."

As they were about to part at the door of the tent Virginia took Lize's face between her hands. "Good night, mother," she said and kissed her to show her that what she had said would not make any difference.

But Lize was not deceived. This unwonted caress made perfectly plain to her the relief which filled the girl's heart.

Lee Virginia was awakened some hours later by a roaring, crackling sound and by the flare of a yellow light upon her tent. Peering out, she saw flames shooting up through the roof of the ranger's cabin, while beside it, wrapped in a blanket, calmly contemplating it, stood Cavanagh with folded arms. A little nearer to the bridge Redfield was sitting upon an upturned box.

With a cry of alarm she aroused her mother, and Lize, heavy eyed, laggard with sleep, rose slowly and peered out at the scene with eyes of dull amazement. "Why don't they try to put it out?" she demanded as she took in the import of the passive figures.

Dressing with tremulous haste, Lee stepped from the tent just in time to see Swenson come from behind the burning building and join the others in silent contemplation of the scene. There was something uncanny in the calm inaction of the three strong men.

Slowly, wonderingly, the girl drew near and called to Cavanagh, who turned quickly, crying out: "Don't come too close and don't be frightened. I set the place on fire myself. The poor old herder died last night and is decently buried in the earth, and now we are burning the cabin and every thread it contains to prevent the spread of the plague. Hugh and Swenson have divided their garments with me, and this blanket which I wear is my only coat. All that I have is in that cabin now going up in smoke—my guns, pictures, everything."

"How could you do it?" she cried out, understanding what his sacrifice had been.

"I couldn't," he replied. "The supervisor did it. They had to go. The cabin was saturated with poison. It had become to me a plague spot, and there was no other way to stamp it out. I should never have felt safe if I had carried out even so much as a letter."

Dumb and shivering with the chill of the morning, Lee Virginia drew nearer, ever nearer. "I am so sorry," she said and yearned toward him, eager to comfort him, but he warningly motioned her away.

"Please don't come any nearer, for I dare not touch you."

"But you are not ill?" she cried out, with a note of apprehension in her voice.

He smiled in response to her question. "No; I feel nothing but weariness and a little depression. I can't help feeling somehow as if I were burning up a part of myself in that fire—the saddle I have ridden for years, my guns, ropes, spurs. Everything relating to the forest is gone, and with it my youth. I have been something of a careless freebooter myself, I fear, but that is all over with now."

He looked her in the face with a sad and resolute glance. "The forest service made a man of me, taught me to regard the future. I never accepted responsibility till I became a ranger, and in thinking it all over I have decided to stay with it, as the boys say, 'till the spring rains.'"

"I am very glad of that," she said. "Yes; Dalton thinks I can qualify for the position of supervisor, and Redfield may offer me the supervision of this forest. If he does I will accept it—if you will go with me and share the small home which the supervisor's pay provides. Will you go?"

In the light of his burning cabin and in the shadow of the great peaks Lee Virginia could not fail of a certain largeness and dignity of mood. She neither blushed nor stammered as she responded, "I will go anywhere in the world with you."

He could not touch so much as the hem of her garment, but his eyes embraced her as he said, "God bless you for the faith you seem to have in me!"

Redfield's voice interrupted with hearty clamor. "And now, Miss Virginia, you go back and rustle some breakfast for us all. Swenson, bring the horses in and harness my team. I'm going to take these women down the canyon. And, Ross, you'd better saddle up as soon as you feel rested and ride across the divide and go into camp in that little old cabin by the dam above my house. You'll have to be sequestered for a few days, I reckon, till we see how you're coming out. I'll telephone over to the Fork and have the place made ready for you, and I'll have the doctor go up there to meet you and put you straight. If you're going to be sick we'll want you where we can look after you. Isn't that so, Lee Virginia?"

"Indeed it is," replied the girl earnestly.

"But I'm not going to be sick," retorted Cavanagh. "I refuse to be sick."

"Quite right," replied Redfield, "but all the same we want you where we can get at you and where medical aid of the right sort is accessible. I'm going to fetch my bed over here and put you into it. You need rest."

Lee still lingered after Redfield left them. "Please do as Mr. Redfield tells you," she pleaded, "for I shall be very anxious till you get safely down the mountains. If that poor old man has any relatives they ought to be told how kind you have been. You could not have been kinder to one of your own people."

These words from her had a poignancy of meaning which made his reply difficult. His tone was designedly light as he retorted: "I would be a fraud if I stood here listening to your praise without saying, without confessing, how deeply weary I got of the whole business. It was simply that there was nothing else to do. I had to go on."

Her mind still dwelt on the tragic event. "I wish he could have had some kind of service. It seems sort of barbarous to bury him without any one to say a prayer over him. But I suppose that was impossible. Surely some one ought to mark his grave, for some of his people may come and want to know where he lies."

He had her thoughts to pleasant paths. "I am glad you are going with the supervisor. You are going, are you not?"

"Yes, for a few days, till I'm sure you're safe."

"I shall be tempted to pretend being sick just to keep you near me," he was saying when Redfield returned, bringing his sleeping couch. Unrolling this under a tree beside the creek, the supervisor said, "Now, get into that."

Cavanagh resigned Lee with a smile. "Good night," he said. "Oh, but it's good to remember that I shall see you tomorrow."

With a happy glance and a low "Goodbye" she turned away.

Laying aside his blanket and his shoes, Cavanagh crept into the snug little camp bed. "Ah," he breathed, with a delicious sense of relief, "I feel as if I could sleep a week!" And in an instant his eyes closed in slumber so profound that it was barren even of dreams.

Tried For Murder After 46 Years.

Fort Smith, Ark., Sept. 13.—When the case of former Lieut. Daniel W. Byars is called at Bonham, Texas, a week from next Thursday, two Arkansas men will give testimony that will decide whether Byars shall be punished for the double killing of Capt. Harris and his son, March 5, 1865, 46 years ago.

These witnesses are John Donoho of Fort Smith and Aubrey Smith of Little Rock, Ark. The former will testify against Byars and the latter for the defense. Both have been advised to hold themselves in readiness to come to Bonham to testify.

Donoho and Smith are the surviving eyewitnesses to the double killing. Byars was indicted in December of 1865 for murder, but escaped and his whereabouts were never discovered until less than 2 months ago.

Are They Married.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 19.—Whether a groom is entitled to his bride with practically all of the ceremony performed, except the formal "I now pronounce you man and wife" feature of the service, will be thrashed out in the local court tomorrow as the result of an interrupted wedding today when wealthy parents of Miss Effie McMinn from Sardis, Miss., caused the detention of their daughter by officers of the juvenile court.

Jess Lee Varner, the groom, eloped from the plantation of the young girl's parents early today. They advised with Circuit Judge Malone on arrival here, and a license was issued. The ceremony had all been said with the exception of pronouncing them man and wife. Then the officers appeared, accompanied by the parent of the bride.

The groom applied for habeas corpus proceedings, which will be heard tomorrow.

Sued For Taxes on $3,000,000.

Eddyville, Ky., Sept. 5.—Perhaps the largest suit ever filed in Lyon county was that of yesterday, when the county and State sued the Ewald Land and Iron Company for back taxes on $3,000,000, representing the value of property not listed in 1907-8, and consisting of money and bonds in St. Louis and the land and old rolling mill property on the banks of the Cumberland river, twelve miles above Eddyville. The suit was filed by Hodges & James, of this city, and J. P. Whittinghill, of Louisville.

Forced To Leave Home.

Every year a large number of poor sufferers, whose lungs are sore and racked with coughs, are urged to go to another climate. But this is costly and not always sure. There's a better way. Let Dr. King's New Discovery cure you at home. "It cured me of lung trouble," writes W. R. Nelson, of Calamine, Ark., "when all else failed and I gained 47 pounds in weight. Its surely the king of all cough and lung cures." Thousands owe their lives and health to it. It's positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds, La-Grippe, Asthma, Croup—all Throat and Lung troubles. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Jas. H. Orme's and Haynes & Taylor's, Marion, Ky.

FREE SAMPLE CURED OLD PERSON'S BOWEL TROUBLE

One of the most remarkable proofs of the unusual laxative merit contained in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is that it is effective not only in people in the prime of life, but at the extremes of ages. As many letters are received from mothers regarding the cures of children, as from men and women of sixty, seventy and eighty years of age. It must be truly a wonderful laxative.

In the cure of constipation and bowel trouble in old people it has no equal. It corrects the constipation, dispels the headache, biliousness, gas, drowsiness after eating, etc. People advancing in years should see to it that their bowels move freely, and if they do not take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You can prolong your life by healthy bowel action. Clogged bowels invite disease. Women about to pass the menstrual period cannot do better than use Syrup Pepsin several times a week until the system has settled to its future condition.

Among the strongest supporters of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are Mr. W. G. Zorn of New Decatur, Ala., and Mr. George S. Spaulding of the National Soldiers' Home, Kansas, both elderly men. The regular size bottles can be bought of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar, but a free sample bottle can be had by sending your address to the doctor.

Crittenden County Good Roads Association.

The above body, which was organized at a meeting on Monday night, Sept. 11, 1911, in the Court House at Marion, met again on Monday night last, and adopted a constitution drafted by the committee whose names are signed to same.

While formed as a result of the agitation to secure the building of the proposed Jefferson Davis Highway through Crittenden Co., the object of the Association is to secure the advantages of good roads for Crittenden county, whether we are able to have the Davis Highway come this way or not. Every person, whether farmer, business man or otherwise, realizes that Crittenden County needs a better road system, and that unless we have it we will lose in every way; in population, in property value, in reputation, and in fact in every way. The first necessity of a county is good schools, because without good schools our children would make no improvement over us, and our people would be worse instead of better. Without good roads, a county school cannot be as good as it should be when children cannot attend school except in fairly good weather, then they do not get the benefit, no matter how good the school is. This is one of the best reasons why we should have good roads, and shows how closely the subjects of schools and roads are connected.

Other counties are having a great awakening in regard to these two things, and it is up to Crittenden to keep pace or consign herself to the back woods to stay. The Jefferson Davis Highway will be the first step, toward the system of roads Crittenden County should have and will have. If Crittenden County will do her share alongside of Caldwell and Livingston, then there is a good chance to have this road built from Hopkinsville to Princeton, through Crider and Fredonia to Marion, thence to Salem, Smithland and Paducah. With this beginning, furnishing a connecting link with all the best roads in the state, it would not be long until Crittenden Co. would place her name among the foremost of the State in the matter of roads. The result would be certain; it would bring increased value of farms, increased trade, better schools, more mining and other improvements too numerous to mention.

Crittenden County Good Roads Association.

The name of this Association shall be, Crittenden County Good Roads Association.

The object of the Association shall be the consideration of the best ways and means to place the building and maintenance of good roads in Crittenden County.

upon an economical basis; and to develop a systematic plan looking to that end, and to assist the Fiscal Court of Crittenden County to develop a systematic plan for the construction and maintenance of permanent good roads at the least cost to the tax payers.

Realizing the importance of a general public interest in the movement for better roads, all citizens and taxpayers of the county, who may be sufficiently interested to work for better roads, are invited to become members of this Association, and in order to give citizens of all parts of all parts of the county an opportunity to become members, there may be organized Local Associations in the various school districts, or neighborhoods in the county, whose members shall be members of this association.

The officers of this association shall be a Chairman, a Vice Chairman and Secy-Treas., and the Principal meeting place shall be in the court room in Marion, Kentucky.

Meetings shall be held regularly once each month at such times as may be hereafter decided upon; and call meeting may be held at such times as the Chairman may designate by call published in the Crittenden Record Press.

The officers shall be elected annually, by the members in attendance at the regular annual meeting, to be held the second Monday in Sept. of each year.

The officers elected for the 1st year being—W. B. Yandel, Chr. T. H. Cochran, Vice Chairman. C. W. Haynes, Secy-Treasurer.

The officers of the local or District Associations shall be a Chr., Vice Chairman and Sec'y Treas., and, when practicable, the Local Associations shall send representatives to attend the regular monthly meeting of this association. (Signed)

J. G. Rochester,
Jno. A. Moore,
J. W. Blue, Jr.

The following two letters were read at the meeting, referring to the Jefferson Davis Highway, and also to the projected Ohio Valley Highway, to extend from Louisville through Hardinsburg, Cloverport, Owensboro, Henderson, Morganfield, Sturgis, Marion, Salem and Smithland to Paducah. This road is almost sure to be built in the near future, and if Marion gets the Davis way, then we will be the meeting point for the two roads.

Princeton, Crider, Fredonia, Salem and Smithland are to send large delegations to Paducah next Friday, to attend the meeting of the Jefferson Davis Highway Association to be held there Friday morning. Marion and Crittenden County should have a large and enthusiastic crowd. Every citizen of the county interested in Good Roads, whether or not he is a member of the Association, is urged to attend. Let us see what other counties are doing for the work, and we will come home with the determination that Crittenden will be at the front and not in the rear.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 16, 1911. County Judge, Crittenden, Co.,

Sir:—I am enclosing you blue print drawn by Mr. S. F. Crecelius, showing the proposed route of the OHIO VALLEY HIGHWAY.

Jefferson and Hardin counties are now building a $90,000 steel bridge over Salt River at West Point, and, as soon as this is completed, there is no reason why the Ohio Valley Highway should not be put into immediate use, provided you gentlemen will see that it is built. There is no Highway in the state of Kentucky needed worse than the Ohio Valley Highway, and I am satisfied, after you have consulted the map and looked over the ground, that you will agree with me. I have taken the liberty of having this map drawn and giving this proposed road the name mentioned above, and will do any thing that I can to assist you in carrying out the project.

Yours very truly,

R. C. Watkins.

Good Roads.

Mr. E. B. Lindsay,
Chairman Button Com.,
Jeff Davis Way Association,
Elkton, Ky.

Dear Editor:—

It is indeed gratifying to note the progress of the Jeff Davis Way Association, organized at Elkton, Aug., 3rd, 1911, by a progressive and determined gathering of citizens from Logan, Todd, and Christian Counties, who declared that meeting was for purpose of devising ways and means to reconstruct the road from Bowling Green to Russellville, to Elkton, to the Jefferson Davis Farm at Fairview and to Hopkinsville, naming it the Jeff Davis Way, it has developed into an organization of not only the three counties mentioned, but now includes Warren, Simpson, Trigg, Marshall, and McCracken counties; with a possibility of Calloway, Graves, Fulton, Hickman, Carlisle and Ballard counties joining in the movement and building connections to the Jeff Davis when completed.

Fourteen years ago, I wrote an article which appeared in the Courier-Journal, in which I said if the public highways of our country were not made passable the year round, and the rural schools improved, that the women would flee from the country with their children and the boys would not return to the farms. No one has more fully realized the truth of this statement than the Kentucky farmer. No class of business is more dependent on weather conditions than farming; so why not provide against enforced idleness by being able to do necessary hauling when farm work cannot be done.

In other states, with the seasons not so regular, lands not so good, nor well watered, farm lands have increased in value until they are selling today at almost double the price ours are bringing, and with ready buyers at hand.

Absolutely Pure

The only Baking Powder made from Royal Grape Cream of Tartar

If all Kentuckians, both rich and poor, large and small, farmers, manufacturers, merchants, professional men, would realize that with good roads, values would double and treble, that production would increase by reason of more producers and that we would all become more prosperous, independent and happier, I am sure not a day would be lost in making this improvement.

Yours truly,

R. C. Watkins.

Paducah, Ky., Sept., 15, 1911.
Hon. J. W. Blue,
Marion, Ky.

My Dear Judge:—

Since our meeting at Hopkinsville on last Saturday, I have attended a GOOD ROADS meeting at Louisville, and there I came in contact with the leading good roads men from every section of the state; but, unfortunately, I found none from the territory along the Ohio River west of Owensboro; and this section is in greater need of a Great Highway than any other section in Western Kentucky.

In a brief talk I made before the Association at Louisville, I urged the great benefits to the state that would result from the building of such a Highway. As the matter now stands, you have two chances of getting such a Highway. One would be by opening a route directly between Paducah and Henderson, and the other would be by securing the building of the Jefferson Davis Highway by what is called the Northern Road so as to make it extend through Caldwell, Crittenden and Livingston counties.

The meeting here on the 22nd of this month, will determine very largely where the Jefferson Davis Highway is to be built between Paducah and Hopkinsville. As I have been forced into identification with the Association that is promoting this Great Highway, I want to urge upon you the necessity of bringing a large delegation to Paducah. You cannot lose anything by it, and, if you can get a large number of your most representative citizens to come to Paducah and make a fight for the route which you prefer for the Jefferson Davis Highway, there is a chance of your winning in that event; and, even if you should lose in that fight, you will have so firmly established your claim to a good State Road as to make certain and sure of your getting one by Act of the General Assembly. You are greatly identified with Livingston County, and I trust that you will exercise your best endeavors to have that county well represented at our convention here on next Friday, the 22nd.

The management of the Kentucky Opera House have placed that beautiful theatre at our service for the purpose of holding this convention, and, from reports all along the route of this Highway, it is almost certain that we will have an immense throng of delegates here representing every county which the road could possibly pass.

I shall be glad to hear from you, and I assure you that you have my very best wishes.

Yours very truly,

W. V. Eaton.

P. S.—Please be prepared to furnish the convention as accurate information as possible about the mileage and the costs of building the Road by way of Marion. This is very important.

Mrs. Champion Entertains

A very pretty compliment to Miss Mable Yandell, of Marion, Ky., was the five hundred party given in her honor this afternoon by her hostess, Mrs. Tom Champion.

Summer flowers were fragrant house decorations and hand-painted score cards kept a record of the games.

In the hall the punch bowl rested in a bed of scarlet verbenas and the refreshing drink was served by Mesdames John Nichols and Harry Harts.

Yellow and white was the color scheme employed in the living and dining room.

The cream was served in dainty yellow bricks and a small cut-and-come again sunflower was used most effectively in decorating the plates.

Those who were so agreeably entertained were Misses Martina Spreklemeyer, Jeanette Lowenstein, Edna Jones, Thadie James, Bliss Corlew, Katie Johnson, Grace Johnson, Elizabeth Simpson, Eliza Cruce, Gail Cruce, Floy Mullen, Mary Hoard, Florence Hoard, Helen Ward, Thurlow Ward, Nellie Ikard, Lillian McNees, Lena Gardenhire, Jennie Williams, Roma Moore, Grace Moore, Jeanette Moore, Dixie Towery, Mable Yandell, Sallie Mays McCoy, Regina Blank, Mesdames Harry Harts, John Nichols, Whiteman and McGill.—Ardmoreite.

YOUNGEST GRANDMOTHER

Mrs. E. W. Bender, of Atlanta, Ga., Holds American Record.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 10.—A grandmother of two children at the age of twenty-nine, and three at thirty-one years, is the record of Mrs. E. W. Bender, of this city. It is claimed that Mrs. Bender is the youngest grandmother on record and her case one of the most remarkable outside of tropical countries.

Mrs. Bender, who is thirty-one years old, was born in 1880 in South Carolina. She was married to E. W. Moore at Columbus, S. C., in 1892, she was only thirteen years and three months old when her first child was born. This child, a daughter, was married in 1909 to Edward Sinclair, and in January, 1910, gave birth to twins, the mother being barely sixteen.

SHADY GROVE.

Quite a number of people from this place were in Marion Monday.

Al Travis, of near Odessa school house, died Wednesday of typhoid fever having been ill several weeks. Mr. Travis leaves a wife and five daughters.

The remains of uncle Noah Fox, a highly respected citizen of the Iron Hill neighborhood, were laid to rest in the cemetery at this place Thursday Sept. 14th. He is survived by four sons, namely—Champ, who is now a soldier in the army; Carlisle, of Otter Pond, Caldwell county; Dick, of the Iron Hill community; and W. H. Fox, of this city; he is also survived by four daughters, namely—Mrs. D. S. Kemp, of Iron Hill; Mrs. R. H. Kemp, of Marion; Mrs. D. J. Hubbard, of Marion; and Mrs. Maude Hubbard, of Missouri. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of the entire community.

Cortez Lemon and sister, Freda, entered school at Marion.

Mrs. Joseph L. Cardwell and granddaughter, Miss Laura Utterback, and father, Willie Utterback, are guests of friends and relatives at Madisonville this week.

W. H. Fox and family are visiting relatives at Lismian this week.

Rev. J. T. Davis is spending this week in Paducah.

Curtis Riggs was in Providence Thursday.

Miss Mae Wood is the guest of her sisters, Misses Margaret and Nannie Wood, of this community, this week. She resides with her sister, Mrs. Yarbrough, in Webster county.

Breaking wheat land, making sorghum, building fences, repairing buildings and land trading is the order of Robert Edward Towery bought of George B. Lamb 2 1/2 acres of land, Tuesday Sept. 12, 1911, consideration, $730.00.

LILY DALE

Health is very good at this writing.

Quite a number from this place attended the spelling match at Crayne Friday night.

Cutting tobacco, making molasses and squirrel hunting is the order of the day at present.

Jim Loyd and family were the guests of Silas Guess, near Piney Fork Saturday and Sunday.

The stork dropped a fine boy at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Maxwell the other day. Roy has carried a broad smile on his face ever since.

Mrs. Ellen Loyd was the guest of Mrs. Stallions Monday.

Miss Moore is progressing nicely with her school. There is no danger of getting cold this winter for we have got a nice new stove.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Boswell, of Piney Creek neighborhood, were visitors at the home of J. N. Sutton, Sunday and Monday.

Mesdames Fletcher and Ollie Deboe called on Mrs. Martha Ordway Tuesday afternoon.

Worth Bousture, of this district, is attending Marion Graded High School again this year.

Guy Ordway, one of our best boys, who married so unexpectedly about two weeks ago, has left us and moved near Crayne.

Sidney Freeman, Louisville, is the guest of M. R. Deboe this week.

George Perry and wife, uncle Billy Loyd and wife visited Frank Loyd last Friday.

FREDONIA

Quite a number of our people attended the State Fair at Louisville this week.

While in Louisville this week, J. T. and Dr. Moore bought new auto cars, the E. M. F. make, and Dr. Todd, a Max-runabout. Compton Moore has joined the bunch of auto enthusiasts and bought a five passenger car.

Miss Chamberlain, of Jeffersonville, Ind., is the guest of Miss Georgia Boaz.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McChesney, of Marion, were with their daughter, Mrs. Will Cox, several days last week.

Will Cox accompanied his son, Paul, to Elkton last Monday, where Paul will attend school this winter.

Miss Mary Wyatt, of Hopkinsville, who has been with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank Wyatt, for several days, returned to Hopkinsville Tuesday.

Frank Wyatt is preparing to build a nice bungalow on his farm near Salem and expects to move there some time in November.

George M. Yancy, of Dycusburg, and nephew, Tom Moore, were guests of Mrs. Robert Jackson Sunday.

Misses Elsie Young and Alice Jackson, of New Bethel, have returned to their respective schools. Miss Elsie to Belmont and Miss Alice to Murphyboro, Tenn.

Mrs. Fannie Koon and daughter, Mrs. Ida Butler, have taken up temporary residence in Princeton, where Mrs. Koon's son, Floyd, is attending school.

Mrs. W. S. Rice has returned from her trip to Manitou, Col., and other points in the west.

Last Tuesday evening Mrs. Mollie Dulaney and Mrs. Robert Jackson entertained a party of friends from Dycusburg, with a very delightful informal dance. The large living room was converted into a ball room, and it was beautifully decorated with honeysuckles and goldenrods, in the dining room, roses and honeysuckles were used and here throughout the evening a delicious lunch was served. An excellent three piece band furnished the music. The guests were Misses Rhea Cooksey, Maude Thomas, Ada Dycus, Nellie Steele, Mesdames Frank Dycus, and McReynolds. Messrs. Frank, Will and Mark Dycus; Frank Scott, Hugh, Lon, Gus and Herbert Grayes; Charlie Gregory, John Hughes Frank Ramage, Bourland Robinson and Prof. Hust.

A HAUNTED ROOM.

The Mysterious Light That George Cary Eggleston Defied.

There was and perhaps still is a room in a certain house in Virginia which was supposed to be haunted. Every time a person slept there he would be sure to wake after awhile to find the whole room pervaded by a dim yellowish gray or grayish yellow light. It was very dim at first, but it increased steadily till the occupant of the chamber fled from the nameless terror in panic. Mr. George Cary Eggleston was not to be daunted by these tales and accordingly decided to try a night there. In "Recollections of a Varied Life" he tells what happened:

It was about midnight when I entered the room. It was raining heavily, and the wind was rattling the stout shutters of the eight great windows of the room.

I went to each of those windows and minutely examined it. They were hung with heavy curtains of deep red.

Having completed my examination, explored the closets and bolted the door, I went to bed. The great four poster was inexpressibly comfortable, and the splash and patter of the rain as it beat upon the window blinds was as soothing as a lullaby. I forgot all about the experiment in which I was engaged, all about ghosts and their ways, and went to sleep.

After a time I suddenly waked to find the room dimly pervaded by that yellowish gray or grayish yellow light which had so disturbed the slumbers of others in that chamber. My awakening was so complete that all my faculties were alert at once. I felt under my pillow and found the pistol still where I had placed it.

Instead of springing hastily from bed, I lay there for a time, watching the weird light as it slowly, almost imperceptibly, increased in intensity. I decided that the gray distinctly predominated, but in the meantime the steady increase in the light and its pervasiveness warned me, and I slipped out of bed.

The rain was still beating heavily against the window blinds, and the strange yellowish gray light was still slowly but steadily increasing. I was resolute, however, in my determination not to be disturbed or hurried by any manifestation. In response to that determination I glanced at the mirror and decided that the mysterious light was sufficient for the purpose, and I resolved I would shave.

Having done so, I bathed in the rapidly increasing light. I was deliberate, however, in donning my clothing, and not till I was fully dressed did I turn to leave the room.

I turned the key. A second later I was out of that chamber, and the oak door of it was securely shut behind me. I went down the great stairway, slowly, deliberately, in pursuance of my resolution. I entered the large hallway below and thence passed to the oak wainscoted dining room, where I sat down to breakfast with the rest of the company.

It was 9 o'clock of a dark, rainy morning. The grayish yellow light was daylight.

A Woman's Sacrifice.

Three years ago a startling tale came to light concerning a prominent business man in Austria. He found himself on the brink of ruin, and his wife came to his rescue at the cost of her own life. Leaving an overheated room one night, she walked up and down a stone flagged passage, barefoot and with nothing on but a nightdress, till she caught a chill which she aggravated by a series of reckless acts. Inflammation of the lungs set in, and she died shortly afterward. Her husband obtained the large sum of money for which her life was insured, and with this he was able to pull through the crisis successfully. He married for a second time within three months of his first wife's death. This husband did not get off scot free, however. A servant in his employ had overheard the conversation in which the heroic young wife had told her husband her intention to die for his sake. The servant informed the police. Then the insurance companies contended it was a case of suicide and sued successfully for the return of the money. The husband was prosecuted for being an accessory to his wife's death and received the punishment he well merited.

Cavanagh,

The Great Conservation Novel

CHAPTER XXII.

OUT OF QUARANTINE INTO HEAVEN.

WHEN Cavanagh awoke it was noon, and Swenson, the guard, was standing over him. "I'm sorry, but it's time to be moving," he said. "It's a long ride over there."

"What time is it?" inquired Cavanagh, with some bewilderment.

"Nearly noon. I've got some coffee ready. Want some?"

"Do I? Just watch me!" And he scrambled out of his bed with vigor and stretched himself like a cat, exclaiming, "Wow, but it does feel good to know that I am out of jail!"

Going down to the stream, he splashed his face and neck in the clear cold water, and the brisk rubbing which followed seemed to clear his thoughts as well as sharpen his appetite.

"You seem all right so far," hazarded the guard.

"I am all right, and I'll be all right tomorrow, if that's what you mean," replied Cavanagh. "Well, now, pack up, and we'll pull out."

For a few moments after he mounted his horse Cavanagh looked about the place as if for the last time, now up at the hill, now down at the meadow and last of all at the stream. "I hope you'll enjoy this station as much as I have, Swenson. It's one of the prettiest on the whole forest."

Together they zigzagged up the side of the hill to the north, and then, with Cavanagh in the lead, followed by his pack horse, they set up the long lateral moraine which led by a wide circle through the wooded park toward the pass. The weather was clear and cold. The wind bit, and Cavanagh, scantily clothed as he was, drew his robe close about his neck, saying: "I know now how it feels to be a blanket Indian. I must say I prefer an overcoat."

A little later the keen eyes of the guard, sweeping the mountain side, were suddenly arrested. "There's a bunch of cowboys coming over the pass," he called.

"I see them," responded Cavanagh. "Get out your glasses and tell me who they are."

Swenson unsung his fieldglasses and studied the party attentively. "Looks like Van Horne's sorrel in the lead, and that bald face bay just behind looks like the one Gregg rides. The other two I don't seem to know."

"Perhaps it's the sheriff after me for harboring Edwards," suggested Cavanagh.

But Swenson remained sober. He did not see the humor of the remark.

"What are they doing on the forest, anyhow?" he asked.

Half an hour later the two parties came face to face on a little stretch of prairie in the midst of the wooded valley. In the sheriff's party were Gregg, the deputy and a big man who was a stranger to Cavanagh. Their horses were all tired, and the big civilian looked saddle weary.

"Good evening, gentlemen!" called the sheriff in southern fashion as he drew near.

"Good evening, Mr. Sheriff," Cavanagh civilly answered. "What's the meaning of this invasion of my forest?"

The sheriff for answer presented the big stranger. "Mr. Cavanagh, this is Mr. Simpson, the county attorney."

Cavanagh nodded to the attorney.

"I've heard of Mr. Simpson," he said.

Simpson answered the question Ross had asked. "We were on our way to your station, Mr. Cavanagh, because we understand that this old man Dunn who shot himself had visited you before his death, giving you information concerning the killing of the Mexican sheep herders. Is that true?"

"It is."

"When did he visit you?"

"Two days ago or maybe three. I am a little mixed about it. You see, I have been pretty closely confined to my shack for a few days."

Gregg threw in a query. "How is the old man?"

"He's all right. That is to say, he's dead. Died last night."

The sheriff looked at Simpson meaningfully. "Well, I reckon that settles his score, judge. Even if he was implicated he's out of it now."

"He couldn't have been implicated," declared the ranger, "for he was with me at the time the murder was committed. I left him high on the mountain in the Basque herder's camp. I can prove an alibi for him. Furthermore, he had no motive for such work."

"What did Dunn tell you?" demanded the sheriff. "What names did he give you?"

"Wait a moment," replied Cavanagh, who felt himself to be on his own territory and not to be hurried. "There's a reward offered for the arrest of these men, is there not?"

"There is," replied the attorney.

"Well, before I make my statement I'd like to request that my share of the reward, if there is any coming to me, shall be paid over to the widow of the man who gave me the information. Poor chap, he sacrificed himself for the good of the state, and his family should be spared all the suffering possible."

"Quite right, Mr. Cavanagh. You may consider that request granted."

steady Lize, and she got through the meal very well. She was unwontedly silent and a little sad as well as constrained. She could see that Lee fitted in with these surroundings, that she was at home with shining silver and dainty dishes, and she said to herself: "I could have been something like her if I'd had any sort of raising, but it's too late now. But, Lord, wouldn't Ed like to see her now!"

It was not yet dark when they came out on the veranda to meet the doctor, who had come to meet Ross, and Lee's anxiety led her to say, "Can't we go up to the cabin and wait for him there?"

"I was about to propose that," replied Redfield. "Shall we walk?"

Lee was instant in her desire to be off, but Lize said: "I never was much on foot, and now I'm hoof bound. You go along, and I'll sit on the porch here and watch."

So Lee, the doctor and Redfield went off together across the meadow toward the little cabin which had been built for the workmen while putting in the dam. It was hardly a mile away, and yet it stood at the mouth of a mighty gorge, out of which the water sprang white with speed.

But Lee had no mind for the scenery, though her eyes were lifted to the meadow's wall, down which the ranger was expected to ride. It looked frightfully steep, and whenever she thought of him descending that trail, worn and perhaps ill, her heart ached with anxiety. But Redfield rambled on comfortably, explaining the situation to the doctor, who, being a most unimaginative person, appeared to take it all as a matter of course.

At the cabin itself Lee transferred her interest to the supper which had been prepared for the ranger, and she went about the room trying to make it a little more comfortable for him. It was a bare little place, hardly more than a camp (as was proper), and she devoutly prayed that he was not to be sick therein, for it stood in a cold and gloomy place, close under the shadow of a great wall of rock.

As it grew dark she lighted a lamp and placed it outside the window in order that its light might catch the ranger's eye, and this indeed it did, for almost instantly a pistol shot echoed from the hillside far above signaling his approach.

"There he is!" she exclaimed in swift rebound to ecstasy. "Hear him shout?"

His voice could indeed be heard, though faintly, and so they waited while the darkness deepened and the voice of the stream rose like an exhalation, increasing in violence as the night fell.

At last they could hear the sound of his horse's feet upon the rocks, and with girlish impulse Lee raised a musical cry, an invitation as well as a joyous signal.

To this the ranger made vocal answer, and they could soon see him moving athwart the hillside, zigzagging in the trail's fashion, dropping down with incredible swiftness. He was alone and leading his horse, but his celerity of movement and the tones of his voice denoted confidence and health.

The doctor laughed as he said, "I don't think a very sick man could come down a mountain like that."

"Oh, he isn't sick yet," said Redfield. "What we are afraid of is a possible development."

Lize was on the veranda when Lee and Redfield returned. "Did he get through?" she asked.

"He's all right so far," returned Redfield cheerily. "We left the doctor about to fly at him. We'll have a report soon."

They had hardly finished telling of how the ranger had descended the hill when the doctor arrived. "He hasn't a trace of it," was his report. "All he needs is sleep. I cut him off from his entire over the range outfit, and there is no reason why he should not come down to breakfast with you in the morning."

Mrs. Redfield thanked the doctor as fervently as if he had conferred a personal favor upon her, and the girl echoed her grateful words.

"Oh, that's all right," the doctor replied in true western fashion. "I'll do as much more for you any time." And he rode away, leaving at least one person too happy to sleep.

The same person was on the veranda next morning when Cavanagh, dressed in the supervisor's best suit of gray cassimere, came striding across the lawn, too impatient of the winding drive to follow it. As he came, his face glowing with recovered health, Lee thought him the god of the morning, and went to meet him unashamed, and he took her to his arms and kissed her quite as he had promised himself to do.

"Now I know that I am delivered," he exclaimed. And they entered the new west together.

ROBT. BOYD,

HOGWALLOW KENTUCKIAN.

Tobe Moseley has stirred up quite a lot of interest in himself by bringing to Hogwallow a tale of his having been bitten by a cow last Sunday. He says he was going along the road in the direction of Rye Straw when suddenly he saw a bunch of bushes on the side of the road shaking vigorously. And out of them jumped a large spotted cow valued at about twenty dollars. With head erect and tail aloft the cow circled around Tobe and then stationed herself in front of him and shook her head. Then reaching over she bit Tobe on the shoulder. He made a struggle to get out of the clutches of the beast, but it was of no avail, and he says he swooned in the wagon ruts from the high excitement. As soon as he could regain his usual composure, he raised an alarm, but by this time the cow had disappeared through the bushes from whence she came. The Deputy Constable, who was at his home at the time of the attack, lost no time in getting on trail of the beast, taking with him his spyglass, and a lot of chains. It is believed by many that the cow must have been crazy.

The Mail Carrier encountered a swarm of yellow jackets on the Gimlet creek road the first of the week, and as a consequence he came into Hogwallow several hours ahead of time.

Until more rat holes can be made in the postoffice some of the rats will have to use the knot holes.

Maine Votes "Wet."

The state of Maine which was "dry" for thirty-five years was voted "wet" Monday by 1000 majority.

How to Save Money.

One dollar deposited in a savings bank that pays 4 per cent, will amount to $2.19 in twenty years. This is simple compound interest. Now, if you deposit $1.00 every year for twenty years, or $20.00 in all, the sum to your credit will have grown to $30.97. Any wage earner can put by $1.00 a week. That money deposited in a savings bank for twenty years will have increased to $1,612. A deposit of $5.00 a week will have grown to $8,000, and this at 4 per cent will be $320.00 a year. There is no secret, no mystery about this. It is clear as the cloudless sun, and the method is just as clean and honest.—Christian Herald.

River of Lava 8 Miles Wide Flowing From Mt. Etna.

Catania, Sicily, Sept. 13.—The eruption of Mt. Etna is assuming the proportions of a real disaster. The lava stream, whose path crosses the railway line circling the volcano, is approaching the railway station to the north, and especially threatening the depots at Moio and Alcantara, which were abandoned yesterday.

Squads of laborers were at work today taking up the railroad tracks and removing all transportable material to places of safety.

The entire crest of Mt. Etna appears to be in a state of ebullition. An exact count of the number of fissures is impossible because of the smoke which shrouds the whole mountain, but there seemed to be more than thirty openings, all belching smoke and lava.

This afternoon it was reported that a total of 79 new fissures had opened in the volcano since the disturbance began. The river of lava has increased in volume, the extended eight miles from its source. The houses of several peasants have been overwhelmed.

The earthquakes continue, terrifying the people for miles about. At Zafferana, on the north coast of Sicily, fifty shocks were recorded during twenty-four hours.

The stream of lava from Mt. Etna, which is now nearly fifty feet deep, is about to invade the bed of the Alcantara river.

The gravity of the eruption of Mt. Etna is indicated by the abandonment of railway stations at Moio and Alcantara, at the north of the volcano. Alcantara marked the limit of the lava flow in the eruption of 1879. Moio was threatened at the time, but escaped.

The eruption means great suffering for the peasantry. The slopes of Etna, with an area of more than 400 square miles, support a population more dense than that of any other portion of Sicily or Italy. There are sixty-five cities and villages in the entire area, and the inhabitants, which obtain an excellent agricultural living from the fertile lava beds, totals more than 300,000.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Firemen Summoned by Mistake.

When the stork arrived yesterday morning at the home of James Armstrong, East Seventh street and Culbertson avenue, New Albany, the prospective parent rushed to the telephone to summon a physician. The exchange operator, through the undue enthusiasm of the parent, thought that the house was afire and sent the New Albany fire department to the Armstrong home. With all haste the apparatus proceeded to the house. There the firemen learned that their services were not needed. The New Albany fire ladders say this breaks all records for freak alarms.
